

The Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago is pleased to announce that it will host the

Seventh Demotic Summer School

Monday – Wednesday, August 27 – 29, 2012

The Demotic Summer School is intended to provide an opportunity to informally discuss work in progress on Demotic texts prior to publication. Participants typically present texts or portions thereof, proposed readings, and problems arising therefrom. They also provide constructive commentary on the readings and problems of other participants.

Please forward this announcement to anyone who might be interested in participating. Questions can be addressed to Brian Muhs at bpmuhs@uchicago.edu.

Potential participants are invited to indicate their interest, and to give a tentative title for their presentation, if possible. They will then be added to the mailing list for following circulars.

Participants are responsible for travel to and from the Summer School, and accommodation and sustenance during the Summer School. The organizers can provide advice, but cannot make reservations or provide subsidies.
